

Con mucho amor! We are Anna and Victor

Thank you so much for taking the time to get to know us. We know that adoption can be a very difficult decision, and we want you to know that our hearts are with you. Through open adoption, we want to welcome our child's biological family as part of our own, staying well-connected through regular phone calls, letters, and visits. Whatever feels best for the birth parents at that time. We want our child to feel loved by all their family members, birth family, and adoptive family.

Our home is in El Paso, TX. Anna grew up in Santa Fe, NM, and Victor grew up in Juarez, MX. We met in 2008 while rock climbing. We fell in love right away and were married a year later. We both grew up in close-knit families that value caring for the people and the world around us. Victor has a daughter whom we both love dearly. Even though she lives full-time in Juarez with her mother, we try to see her when we can. We wanted to continue growing our family as we loved being with her and her mother. It became obvious to us that two people from such different backgrounds, speaking different languages, and wanting to adopt, was a special and unique situation, and that maybe we were meant for this path to parenthood over any other.

We live in El Paso, a desert town in West Texas, in a very safe neighborhood near a very neat and popular park where many young families gather after school and on weekends. We live close to one of the best elementary and high schools in El Paso. Our community is very family-oriented, and there are many activities in town for kids on the place or at the museums or in the outdoors. We also live close to our families, meaning we can visit them easily for holidays, birthdays, and other special events. We love spending time with our dog, Chachi, playing frisbee, running in the mountains, and riding bikes.

About Anna

Anna is very loving, funny, and creative.
She works as a midwife with her small

About Anna

About Victor

Victor is kind, sensitive, spontaneous, and bellicious.

Victor writes from home for a small newspaper in Colorado, focusing on social and biological issues around the US/Mexico border.

He loves rock climbing, especially in the desert mountains.

He is a biologist, loves exploring plants and animals for issues across his adventures.

He loves to cook, garden, listen to music, and go to modern art museums.

Victor also speaks Spanish and English.

Our hope is to always explore with our child in our everyday lives, showing them that beauty can be seen in most places. We promise to always portray laughter and silliness with our child, showing them that creativity and fun can always change a moment for the better. We will help guide our child's spirituality, advocating for good values embraced by both families. Encouraging our child to always follow their heart, we will teach them to know what will bring them happiness in the world.

With love and support from their birth and adoptive family, we are optimistic that our adopted child will continually feel affirmed in who they are, which will allow them to grow into a beautiful person.

Thank you so much for taking the time to read our letter. We are both so excited to grow our family through adoption.
